On many occasion I search for information on the Internet. And most of the times I find this information straight away because someone wrote or made a video about it. I am always thankful for the time those people spent in publishing there knowledge. Without their effort I sometimes would have just given up.

I think – to share knowledge and information – is what helps mankind to advance.

Although I am no expert in any field I think that the things on this website maybe could help someone else. Therefore I decided to start with this blog and share my projects, repairs, ... with you. Hope you find something useful!

Best regards,

Lui
